Join us for light refreshments as we contemplate the work of Susan Deaton.

“My art is a process of going from a vague idea to a detailed complexity of lines and values – the direction my lines take is dictated by the rhythm and balance of the composition, which is bound to the contrasts of positive and negative space. By embracing uncertainty and letting go of perfectionism, my creative process involves finding symbols representing emotions and imperfections within myself and society. My symbols emerge into definitions of my ideas, orchestrated to tell a story.”
